Baba and Mansoor's Ramadan Lesson

Mansoor: Baba, why do we give so much charity in Ramadan? You and Mama are always packing food and giving money to the needy.

Baba: That's a great question, my dear. Do you know who was the most generous person?

Mansoor: The Prophet Muhammad ﷺ!

Baba: MashAllah! That's right. He was the most generous of all people. And in Ramadan, his generosity was even greater—like a strong wind that rushes to do good!

Mansoor: Like the wind? How?

Baba: Just like the wind moves quickly and reaches everywhere, the Prophet ﷺ would give without delay, helping everyone in need. Angel Jibreel (علیہ السلام) would visit him every night in Ramadan to review the Quran, and this made him even more eager to do good.

Mansoor: Oh! So, learning the Quran makes us want to be kind and give?

Baba: Exactly, my son! When we read the Quran and understand Allah's words, our hearts become soft, and we want to help others—just like the Prophet ﷺ.

Mansoor: Baba, I want to be generous too! Can I give something to the poor today?

Baba: Of course! Let's prepare food packs together. You can also share your toys with children who don't have any.

Mansoor: That sounds wonderful! I want to give my favorite toy car to a boy who has none.

Baba: That is a beautiful act of generosity, Mansoor. Allah loves those who give with a sincere heart.

Mansoor: Baba, I want to be like the Prophet ﷺ and give even more in Ramadan!

Baba: MashAllah! That is the best way to follow his example. The more we give, the more Allah blesses us. Let's make this Ramadan our most generous one yet!

Mansoor: Yes, Baba! Let's do it together!
